REGISTRATION DEADLINE: Friday, January 6th

Keep Your New Year's Resolutions!

Are you working on a book manuscript, journal article, creative writing project, grant application, teaching and learning conference paper, or other writing project? Would you like to set aside during winter break dedicated to starting, improving or even finishing this project?

The Center for Teaching and Learning, The Writing Center and The Krupp Library are sponsoring Bryant’s first Faculty and Staff Writers’ Retreat on January 17th and 18th. The retreat is open to any faculty or staff member working on a writing project.

The retreat will provide a structured opportunity for you to further your writing project. You will participate in small group planning and goal setting sessions, have ample time and inspirational space for independent work, and have access to a variety of consultants. Altogether, participants will spend 15 hours on their writing projects. See the attached schedule for more information.

Throughout the retreat, staff will be available to provide consultation and targeted assistance. Consultants include:
- Stephanie Carter, Assistant Director of the Writing Center
- Bob Shea, Director of Faculty Development
- Sam Grabelle, Teaching and Learning Projects Administrator and Writing Specialist
- Laura Kohl, Head of Reference Services

Participants are also encouraged to share their work with each other if appropriate and desired. A voluntary peer review session will be available on the second day.

Space is limited to ten participants and priority will be given to tenure-track faculty. We expect an enthusiastic response to this event so please register early.
