The Wall Street Journal cited Bryant, among other schools, in a story titled, "The Hot New MBA: Supply-Chain Management." Students in Bryant's One-Year MBA, designed for new or recent graduates, can specialize in Global Supply Chain Management. Bryant's traditional Two-Year MBA offers the same specialty.

WHAT SETS BRYANT'S PROGRAM APART?

1 Distinctive Leadership Development

- Your leadership education begins your first year and culminates with your senior Capstone course taught by a cross-disciplinary group of faculty.
- Collaborate as a member of a high-functioning Capstone team working with supply chain executives from regional and global companies to solve their supply chain problems.
- Set yourself apart from the competition by immersing yourself in a real-world learning experience where your team-recommended solutions could save businesses millions.

2 Integration of Key Functions

- Unlike other schools offering only a few dedicated Supply Chain Management courses, our comprehensive program teaches you a process approach to integrating key functions within and across companies to optimize supply chain performance and design supply chain strategy.

- Opportunities to sharpen your skills in different industries through academic competitions such as the Bose Supply Chain Collegiate Case Competition, which Bryant won twice in three years based on the quality of their recommendations and presentation.

3 Proficiency in SAP® Software

- As a Global Supply Chain Management student, you will develop skills using SAP Software, a leading Enterprise Resource Planning tool.
- Stand out from your peers with this key knowledge and skill highly valued by employers.
